Nixon Mideast Visit Seen Both Likely and Soon

MIAMI, May 26 (NYT).-White House officials said yesterday that President Nixon was likely to visit the Middle East soon, possibly before or on his way to Moscow next month for a meeting with Leonid Brezhnev, the Soviet leader.

Ronald Ziegler, the press secretary, said there was a "distinct possibility" that Mr. Nixon would stop in the Mideast "in the near future." He said no definite plan or schedule had been agreed on. No indication was given when or where in the Middle East the visit would be.

Mr. Ziegler would not state the purpose of Mr. Nixon's Mideast visit, but he noted that the President had been receiving messages from Secretary of State Henry Kissinger on his peace mission there. Presumably the President's visit would bear on any agreement that Mr. Kissinger may achieve between Israel and Syria.

The press secretary said in a briefing that Mr. Nixon now expected to arrive in Moscow about June 24, but he emphasized that this, too, was not certain. There was speculation, which Mr. Ziegler did not discourage, that Mr. Nixon would leave Washington on June 22 and stop in Brussels for meetings with West European leaders at NATO headquarters before proceed-

Evidence Said to Prove Payoff Followed Nixon's Talk of Hun!

By James M. Naughton

Committee has what its investigators believe is conclusive evidence a hush-money payment of $75,000 to Howard Hunt ir was initiated on March 21, 1973, a few hours after President Nixon told John Dean 3d that such a payment would "keep the cap on the bottle" of the Watergate scandal.

The evidence, pinpointing the date of the payment to Hunt, a convicted Watergate conspirator. is based on the travel records of Sherman Unger, a Cincinnati lawyer and former Nixon administration official,

Informed of the contents of this article, Ronald Ziegler, press secretary to President Nixon, charged that the information had been "leaked to create a negative inference against the President," who, he said, had never authorized such a payment

Mr. Unger confirmed, in a telephone interview this weekend. that he was the so-called "mystery witness" whose dinner engagement in Washington on March 21, 1973, was the crucial clue to determining the date of the payment to Hunt.

Mr. Unger's testimony about the dinner party, along with his travel records substantiating the date of the dinner, were central elements of evidence that led a federal grand jury here to indict seven former associates of the President on March 1 for allegedly obstructing the Watergate investigation.

More important, the travel records—receipts for an airline flight from Cincinnati to New York and a New York hotel bill, along with Mr. Unger's pocket appointment book-represent the key to a potential article of impeachment charging President Nixon with obstruction of justice.

The records were turned over to the Judiciary Committee on March 25 by the grand jury and

WASHINGTON, May 26 were examined at a closed im-(NYT). - The House Judiciary peachment hearing last week.

The records rebut a major White House defense of the President—that the date of the payment to Hunt was unclear and that the Senate Watergate committee initially fixed the date at March 20, 1973, which is one day before the date on which, according to Mr. Nixon, he learned of the hush-money payments and the the scope of the Watergate cover-up attempt. Hunt and Frederick LaRue, the former Nixon re-election committee official who served as a gobetween in the hush-money payments, both testified at the Senate Watergate hearings that they could not recall the precise date of the March payment.

But LaRue subsequently told a Watergate grand jury that he remembered that the payment had been made the same night he had dinner with a personal friend, whom he identified to the grand jury as Mr. Unger. Three members of the Judiciary Committee disclosed separately, and Mr. Unger confirmed in the telephone interview, that his travel records proved that the dinner — ironically, in LaRue's anartment at the Watergate com-

Fulbright Is Likely Watergate Victim in Primary Tomorrow By Lou Cannon LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 26 (WP).—Two political assumptions, one peculiar to Arkansas and another that is widely shared across the nation in the wake of Watergate, are being put to the test here Tuesday in an unusual Democartic primary that seems likely to end the career of Sen. William Fulbright. The larger assumption is that

Democrats as well as Republicans, face the electoral retribution of voters who have lost faith in the integrity and effectiveness of their government. This calculation has been the basis of a smooth, well-ordered campaign conducted against Sen. Fulbright by popular Gov. Dale Bumpers, who says that "the people of Arkansaz are disappointed that

Gov. Dale Bumpers

Congress hasn't been able to exercise leadership during this period of a crippled presidency." The Arkansas assumption is stated this way by a veteran politician here: "Good Arkansans spend their lives cussing out the Arkansas Gazette and Bill Fulbright for being too radical and internationalist. But every day they read the Gazette and every six years they vote for Fulbright." Arkansans are still reading the all congressional incumbents.

Gazette (circ. 140,000), which regularly lends its best efforts to the denunciation of Gov. Bumpers and to the celebration of Sen. Full-right. However, every professional sounding in this state, including the senator's own private polls, indicate that Sen. Pulbright appears to be failing in his efforts to gain a sixth term.

Lisbon Coup Awakes No Echoes in Macao

By H.D.S. Greenway

MACAO (WP).-The April coup in Portugal may have brought vast political changes in the homeland and stirred new thoughts of independence in its African territories, but nothing of the sort is even contemplated for this small and slightly decadent colonial peninsula on the south coast of China.

No joyous crowds surged through these quiet streets and cobbled alleys when the coup was announced. No tanks were seen on the banyan-shaded Praia

Nobody closed the airport because there is no airport. The ferries and hydrofolis which daily bring in thousands of tourists from Hone Kong, 40 miles across the Pearl River estuary, continued uninterrupted service.

Views of Peking

Portugal could not give Macao its freedom if it wanted to. The Portuguese have held these six square miles for 400 years but Peking considers both Portuguese Macao and British Hong Kong as Chinese territories temporarily occupied by foreign powers.

The Chinese population, which accounts for about 98 percent of Macao's more than 300,000 inhabitants, reacted not at ail. For them a coup in Lisbon means nothing. Only the Portuguese were excited.

There are probably no more than 12,000 persons with Portuguese passports in all Macao and fewer than 1,000 of them were born in Portugal. But even so, the leading Portuguese newspaper. Gazeta Macaense, increased its circulation from 500 to 1,600 in a few days, and in the Solman cafe, where the Portuguese gather, it is said that the coup replaced cuckoldry as a subject for conversation for at least a

Portugal's Textile Workers Get Pay Rise, End Walkout

LISBON, May 26 (UPI) -About 10,000 textile workers today accented ware increases and agreed to end a 13-day strike. This eased a labor situation that threatens Portugal's shaky economy, Textile union officials said the workers would be given an immediate increase of 1,000 escudos $40 a month. The only condition was "an immediate return to work," officials said.

Minimum Level

1,000-escudo increase brings textile workers wages up to the minimum scale of 3,300 ecudos ($132) a month introduced by the government yesterday.

Meanwhile, scattered strikes continued throughout the country. In Setubal, 25 miles south of Lisbon, bakers shut off their ovens to back demands for regular working hours.

The minimum wage of 3,300 escudos a month established yesterday by the government was slightly more than half of what workers have been demanding: they want 6.000 a month. The government acknowledged that the move was an "insufficient" first stage and affected only 50 percent of the nation's work force.

Sadat Pushes Plan for Internal Reform

By Henry Tanner

CAIRO, May 26 (NYT) .- Although he has been hampered by the delay in achieving a separation of Israeli and Syrian troops, President Anwar Sadat is pushing aliead with his program for the political and economic transformation of Egypt. Every day brings its share of minor or major news items:

• A few days ago the grandson of Ahmed Orabi, a 19thcentury nationalist hero, was released from jail after serving 20 years of a life sentence for subversive activities. • The day before, the National Assembly discussed plans for the reactivation of the Cairo and Alexandria stock markets, which have been defunct for 20 years, and for making the Egyptian pound convertible. · And the day before that, a former member of Egypt's highest tribunal, the State Council, was reported to be suing the government in his former court for $60,000 damages for having been dismissed without cause and later tortured under the Nasser Rose al Youssel the weekly that reported the suit, said that there was a "club" of several hundred former civil servants bringing similar actions, Re-cently the State Council, in a landmark decision, found that all expropriations of private property under Nasser were illegal and had to be reversed. • Abdel Aziz Hegazy, who took over the cabinet as first deputy premier in April, has just spent 10 days in Tehran discussing Iranian investments in Egypt. Not long ago. Iran was described by the Egyptian press as an American dagger pointed at the heart of the Arabs.

Foreign diplomats have defined Mr. Sadat's new policy as "de-Nasserization." The President and his aides reject the term. They say that Mr. Sadat is givthe Egyptian nation modern cast, but that, far from breaking with the Nasserite revolution of 1952, he is only "correcting past mistakes" while preserving the valid aspects of Nasser's policies.

Mr. Sadat's contention is that the Egyptian Army's crossing of the Suez Canal in the October war was a liberating event that ended Egypt's humiliation and paralyzing self-doubt. It made Sgrot strong enough to open its doors to the outside world and devote itself to the task of saving its desperately ill economy.

The President presented his program for the next 25 years in a 20,000-word charter, which was submitted to the electorate in a referendum on May 15. Not surprisingly, the document was endorsed by 99.95 percent of the Summed up. the main points of the program are:

· A call for rapid economic development, which has been by the head of the Egyptian National Bank.

• An "open door" financial policy to attract private foreign investors by establishing industrial free zones and giving investors liberal terms for the repatriation of their profits and protection against nationalization and expropriation.

While many would-be investors have come to look things over, few major projects have actually begun and most of the economic news in the local papers is written in the future tense.

· Nonalignment in foreign affairs. • An "open society," in which citizens' rights are protected by the courts against police repression and bureaucratic whim. · Systematic planning for social development, for the applimaintain that the work goes on. that most of the pressing decisions do get made and that the bulk of it is being conducted with Mr. Kissinger's active participation by cable telephone.

The secretary has been away for four weeks on his latest Middle East peace-seeking mission. He is due back this week. But he has many more trips scheduled—to Canada, India, the Soviet Union, Japan and Latin America. How does a bureaucracy of 13-

100 function when the boss is away, and what, if any dif-ferences are there between Mr. Kissinger's stewardship in absentia and those of his predecessors, Dean Rusk or the peripatetic John Foster Dulles? Veterans of the Foreign Service remember that when Mr. Dulles attempted to run things from overseas, "confusion" ensued.

Remote Control Mr. Rusk never even tried to run things by "remote control." merely receiving and reading department cables when he was traveling, the veterans recall. Remote control works for Mr. Kissinger in most cases, his defenders say, because he has superior communications and senior deputies in Washington who are attuned to his thinking on most issues, and because he knows most policy matters well enough to react effectively.

As of last Wednesday, the department had sent him 907 cables, an evarge of almost 40 a dey since April 28. Mr. Klasinger sent-588 cables from the Middle East, an average of about 24 a day for the same period.

On matters of urgency, "flash telegrams," as they are called in the department, have reached Mr. Kissinger 25 minutes after As an example of quick action the aide cited the department's response to the May 18 detonation of a nuclear device by India that happened while Henry was away. Text Is Suggested

-"the closest thing to a surprise

"We flash telegraphed him early Saturday morning, maybe about 3 a.m., telling Henry the device had been detonated," he recounted. "About 10 am., we cabled a suggested text of the U.S. response to the Indian test-the public line. "That same day he came back with charges—which were what we put out-that the United States continues to oppose proliferation of nuclear weapons." "Then the issue was how to handle that question in the meeting with [Japanese Foreign Minister Masayoshij Ohira and the inevitable raising of the question at the CENTO [Central Treaty Organization) meeting Our suggestions went out Sunday noon. We had answers back in time for the opening of business on Monday with changes, additions and

Mr. Klasinger had expected that he would be home in time to see Mr. Ohira last Monday afternoon and attend the annual four-nation CENTO meeting on Thursday. subtractions.

More Smoothly

"It worked out a lot more smoothly than it had any right to do," a Kissinger side said. Two other top assistants assert that the department actually gets more done when Mr. Kissinger is away because he has the habit of letting things pile up on his deak when he is here

His surrogates, Mr. Rush, who was named yesterday as White House economic coordinator, and the State Department executive assistants, Lawrence Eagleburger and George Springstein, are old hands at managing bureaucracies and they are accustomed to keeping the flood of paper moving.

"Nobody says it works as well as if he were here," a deputy said.
"But the Middle East might haveblown up again if he stayed here, so you have to make your choices. Obviously you can't do it forever and you can't do it too frequentby. You can't give him the depthand the number in cables. Another limiting factor is the strain -how long can you take shuttling back and forth, physically? MIAMI, May 26 (NYT).-President Nixon told the American people yesterday that the material quality of life in this country had been maintained at an "unparalleled level" despite inflation and unemployment and that there are "encouraging signs today that the worst is behind campaign, Sen. Fulbright has been unable to disassociate himself from what Gov. Bumpers calls "the problems of Washington," a phrase embracing inflation, the energy shortage, Watergate and diminishing confidence in government.

"He is trying to make Watergate rub off on me," the 69-yearold Sen. Fulbright complains. Many Arkansans think that Gov. Bumpers is succeeding in this aim, assisted both by his own personable campaigning and b. Sen. Fulbright's increasingly strident attacks on the governor. Frustrated by Gov. Bumpers's refusal to debate him. Sen. Fulbright has tried to turn the unpopularity of Washington politicians in general and President Nixon in particular to his own advantage.

Nothing would make Richard Nixon happier than a Fulbright affect on May 28th." proclaims one of Sen. Fulbright's ads. The anti-Nixon tone of the Fulbright campaign is based upon a poll by political scientist Jim Ranchino of Arkadelphia, which shows that two out of three Arkansans now disapprove of Mr. Nixon. The President won overwhelmingly in Arkansas when he was re-elected in 1972. When the campaign started two months ago, a private poll rillowed that the 49-year-old governor had an incredible 91 percent favorable job rating, a finding that drove the Fulbright media experts to the unusual actic of praising Gov. Bumpers by name on television while conlending that he was unqualified to be senator

The Fulbright ads concede more than Gov. Bumpers's popuare an admission of Sen. Fuloright's own unpopularity with trkansans, many of whom view im as remote, aging and more nterested in international probems than in his home state. A random poll of 30 Arkansas veters produced 14 who volunteered criticisms of Sen. Fulbright and only nine who said they planned to vote for him. been there too long and "He's out of touch" were two of the recurring criticisms. Two voters, both in their 20s, said that Sen. Fulbright "talked down to people." The black vote is crucial to Sen.

Fulbright's hopes. One of his strategists says that he must win the black community by a 3-1 vote in order to defeat Gov. Eumpers. A voter turnout of 500,000 is expected, with a fifth to a sixth of it black. Sen. Fulbright is still remembered among some blacks for his long opposition to civil rights legislation and even for his declaration in his first campaign in 1944 when he said, "I am not for Negro participation in our primary elections and I do not approve social equality." But he prove social equality." gained black support by opposing the nomination of Harrold Carswell to the Supreme Court in 1970 and he won 70 percent of the black vote against segrega-tionist James Johnson in 1968.

"For some people," he said, "these changes have meant a severe strain on the family budget, shorter working hours and even the loss of a job. But the majority of Americans have come through this period well."

Furthermore, he said, there are signs that the administration's economic policies are paying off. Thus, there will be no major change in policy. The minor changes Mr. Nixon announced are as follows:

· He appointed Kenneth Rush, the deputy secretary of state, as counselor to the President for economic policy, to coordinate economic policies throughout the administration. Mr. Rush who will have cabinet rank, will mediate disputes between various officials. particularly Secretary of the Treasury William Simon and Roy Ash, director of the Office of Management and Budget.

• He urged Congress to set up a permanent unit to succeed the Cost of Living Council, the authority of which will expire on June 30. He said that what was needed was a "small, flexible organization" in the White House, a "cost of living task force" that would monitor wages, prices, industry hottlenecks, shortages and other factors that bear on inflation. The task force would have only advisory authority.

· He has directed the Council of Economic Advisers to establish "a high-level group" to study the prospect of a shortage of capital for investment, Mr. Nixon said this was as serious a threat to the economy as the shortage of foods and materials. This advisory group would be charged with devising measures to deal with

Basically, Mr. Nixon said, his administration will pursue its current policies: an emphasis on increasing supplies of products, opposition to the tax cut that Senate Democrats are pressing, holding the federal budget to a level of $305 billion for the fiscal year beginning July 1 and support of the Federal Reserve Board's "tight money" actions. Harsh Medecine

"The requirements for full economic recovery may sound like medicine-budgetary restraint, no tax cut, tight moneybut there is no alternative." he said. "I wish I could tell you that there is a way out of the present inflation without such measures but there is not. We cannot spend our way to prosperity. Neither can we achieve prosperity or price stability by putting America back into a straitjacket of controls." But the President saw a silver lining on some of the economic

"Despite a din in the first three months of this year resulting from the energy crisis, personal incomes today - after inflation and after taxes-are still 14 percent higher than they were five years ago," he said. Real income for the first quarter of this year however was lower than it was in the final quarter of 1973.

"The number of Americans working today is at a record While the rate of those unemployed has risen only slightly," Mr. Nixon said, "And the quality of life in America-the ability to feed, clothe and house our people-has continued at an unparalleled level."

The unemployment rate in April was 5 percent. "Our efforts to dampen inflation are also beginning to pay off," he said. "The chief causes of inflation last year, and in the first few months of this year. were the increases in food and energy prices. As the shortages of food have eased in the past several months, the wholesale costs of basic food items have declined sharply. Prices of wheat, corn, soybeans, beef, hogs and chicken are all down." The annual rate of inflation for the first quarter of this year, as measured by the gross national product, was 11.5 percent.

Federal Reserve Chief Warns Inflation Perils U.S. Future

Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, said today that "the future of our country is in jeopardy" if the recent rate of inflation is not moderated.

Using nnusually grim language about the inflation problem, but disclosing no changes in policy. Mr. Burns said that, although the recent rise in interest rates was "troublesome," it must "for a time be tolerated." He pledged "continued resistance to swift growth in money and credit," even though one result of that policy has been temporarily higher interest rates.

"If long continued," he said in a commencement address at Illinois College in Jacksonville, Ill. inflation at anything like the present rate would threaten the very foundation of our society... do not believe I exaggerate in saying that the ultimate conseuence of inflation could well be significant decline of economic nd political freedom for the merican people."

Committee members from the grand jury evidence they saw, and affirmed by Mr. Unger, the following are the main ingredients in what one congressman called "the case of the smoky fireplace": On the night in question, LaRue had dinner at his apartment with Mr. Unger and Manyon Millican, another former campaign official. LaRue said that a key to remembering that the dinner was the same night as the payment of the silence money was that the fireplace in the apartment had malfunctioned, filling the apartment with smoke.

· Earlier that day, allegedly at the instruction of former Attorney General John Mitchell. La-Rue took $75,000 in $100 bills remaining from secret campaign funds and sealed them in a plain, 8 1/2-by-11-inch envelope. Following the dinner, LaRue asked Mr. Millican to drive to Potomac, Md. a Washington suburb, and leave the envelope in the mailbox at the home of William Bittman, then Hunt's defense attorney.

• The following day, Mr. Bittman gave the envelope, still sealed to Hunt.

The significance of Mr. Unger's testimony and records is illustrated by the alleged "overt acts" listed in the grand jury indictment of H. R. Haldeman the former White House chief of staff; John Ehrlichman, the former domestic adviser to Mr. Nixon; Mr. Mitchell and four Nixon Talk Cited

The grand jury charged that one overt act was Mr. Nixon's meeting the morning of March 21 with Mr. Haldeman and Dean. At the time, Dean was the White House legal counsel.

According to the edited transcripts of Watergate tape recordings, transcripts made public early this month by the President, Dean told Mr. Nixon that Hunt was threatening to reveal 'scamy' activities he had performed for the White House unless he received $120,000. At one point in the transcripts,

Mr. Nixon said to Dean: "Just looking at the immediate problem, don't you think you have to handle Hunt's financial sifuation damn soon?" Dean replied that he had discussed it with Mr. Mitchell. The President then said: "It seems to me we have to keep the cap on the bottle that much, or don't have any options." Later in the March 21 discussion, the transcript shows, Mr. Nixon said of the Hunt

"Would you agree that that's the prime thing that you damn well better get done?" "Obviously," Dean replied, "he ought to be given some signal anyway.

According to the White House transcript, Mr. Nixon uttered an expletive and said, "Get it." Some members of the Judiclary Committee disclosed last week that the full sentence they heard on the March 21 tape was "God damn it, get it." Other members said that they remembered it as "For Christ's sake, get it."

The grand jury indictment alleged that 30 minutes after the meeting ended Mr. Haldeman telephoned Mr. Mitchell, that Mr. Mitchell telephoned LaRue and "authorized" payment of $75,000 "for the benefit of Mr. Hunt," that the money was delivered to Hunt's lawyer that night and that Mr. Mitchell "assured" Mr. Ehrlichman the following day that Hunt "was not a 'problem' any longer."

The proportion of the suburban population that was black in 1970 was about 5 nercent, roughly the same as it was in 1960. The new study contains no explanation for the change in Southern cities. Mr. Tacuber speculated that it probably is due to two factors—the economic advances of nonwhite families and open-housing laws which give nonwhites a legal tool for prying open white neighborhoods. Mr. Tacuber also observed that the amount of desegregation in Southern housing patterns was small, "What is important is that the trend Itoward increased segregation] has been broken," he

The analysis covers 109 cities. Latin Americans The sharpest changes in the last 10 years have occurred in those cities where the nonwhite population includes not only blacks but persons of Latin American origin, primarily Cubans and Mexican-Americans. For example, sharp declines in segregation were reported for

San Antonio, Texas, and San Diego, Calif., cities with large Mexican - American populations, and Miami, which has a large new Cuban population. The changes in the extent of segregation in those cities were much more dramatic than those in Southern cities where the population is composed almost entirely of blacks and whites. Mr. Tacuber observed that such comparisons might indicate that persons of foreign extraction have less trouble being integrated with whites than do American Blacks. He said comparisons with previous census analyses show that foreign émigre populations such as the Chinese have become more widely dispersed than the black blocks within a central city. # Reversal of Calley Conviction Seen Likely

By Wayne King

COLUMBUS, Ga., May 26 (NYT).—Although still a military prisoner and dishonorably discharged from the Army, former ist Lt. William Calley appears to be living well while he awaits civilian court action that some anthorities-including the judge in the case himself-say has a good chance of reversing altorether his conviction on charges of mass murder of Vietnamese civilians at My Lai

Calley, who has been free from his house arrest on personal bond since Feb. 27, now comes and goes as he pleases—with the exception of having to clude newsmen driving about the city of Columbus in a white Mercedes Benz sports car loaned to him by a sympathizer, taking flying lessons at $17 an hour and preparing for courses he has signed up for at a local college.

He is not employed, although his attorney says he has received a number of job offers he is mull-ing over. The exact amount con-tained in the defense fund raised through contributions is not known, but is said to be substantial—into six figures.

Calley's appeals and reviews within the military system are now complete, and he has two im-portant challenges pending in federal court. The first, to be argued early next month, demands disclosure by the Army of all material relevant to Calley's conviction-in-cluding the so-called "Peers Report." the secret Army investigation of the My Lai incident said to contain information on whether Army higher-ups tried to conceal the massacre. Also sought are any eyewitness accounts of the incident and any reports made to the government by the so-called "plumbers" unit involved in the Watergate affair. The White House unit is alleged to have covertly inquired into the My Lai-

That move is preliminary to the major action by the Calley de-fense attorneys to overturn the military conviction on constitutional grounds. Federal Judge Robert Elliott of the Georgia Middle District Court, who released Calley on $1,000 personal bond, has agreed to hear the arguments June 24. Judge Elliott, in a highly unusual public statement, has already said in court, in response to prodding by prosecution attorneys, that he felt Calley would be successful in

Included in the $5.9 million was an estimated $3,573,000 spent by the Department of Defense and the White House Communications Azency for communications support in connection with the LBJ Ranch in Texas, where the President spent most of his vacations the committee said in a report.

The $5.9 million also includes $770,000 for office space for Mr. Johnson in the Federal Office Building in Austin, Texas. In addition, $15,000 was spent for installation and repair of his suit to overturn the convic-

Secret Service facilities at another Johnson Ranch and $34,000 for work at a hangar on the LBJ Ranch "to accommodate news conferences, television broadcasts and the entertainment of foreign dignitaries."

The assessment is based in part on the legal similarities between the Calley case and that of Army Capt, Howard Levy, who was convicted for disobeying an order and other offenses in refusing to train Army medics for Vietnam duty. At least one of the same articles of the Uniform Code of Military Justice used to convict Calley—that dealing with conduct umbecoming an officer-was ruled unconstitutional in the Levy case.

Calley's attorneys, most notably Houston Gordon of Covington, Tenn, himself a former Army officer, who was forbidden the opportunity to defend Calley in the court-martial proceedings, also argue that numerous procedural errors were committed in convict-ing the lieutenant. Regardless of the outcome, it is quite possible that Calley will be free on parole within a matter of months This arises from the action of Army Secretary Howard Calloway in cutting Calley's 20-year sentence—which had already been reduced previously from life imprisonment—to 10 years. The rather preferential treatment for a convicted mass murderer prompted the Atlanta Constitution to comment sarcastically: "At the present rate of progress, Lt. William C. Calley ought to be headed for a Congressional

SLA, Black Army Said to Join In a Message to Miss Hearst

LOS ANGELES, May 26 (AP). The search for Patricia Hearst and William and Emily Harris continued today as authorities studied a tape recording with a voice alleged to be that of a woman field marshal in the Symbionese Liberation Army.

The tape recording was received late yesterday by radio station KPFA of Berkeley. It carries the voices of a woman claiming to be a general field marshal of the SLA and a man who said he was the minister of cultural affairs for the Black Liberation Army. An FBI spokesman said today that his office has no evidence of other radical groups aiding the SLA, believed to be a small

"This united front of urban guerrilla organizations was forged out of an emergency meeting after the events in Los Angeles last week." she said. She apparently referred to the shootout May 17 between police and SLA members which left six who called himself General Field Marshal Cinque. The FBI agent in charge of the Hearst case, Charles Bates, said that he had never heard of the United People's Liberation Army. "From what I know about the tape, it doesn't appear to come from Patricia Hearst or the Harrises." The other person on the tape identified himself as Thunga. Abdul Asad, the minister of

The Los Angeles Times said in today's editions that through her job as a clerk-typist at the University of California at Berkeley, Mrs. Harris had access to data showing when Miss Hearst might be attending classes and

U.S. Aide Gives Top Priority to Europe, Japan

WASHINGTON, May 26 (AP). -Deputy Secretary of State Kenneth Rush said today there can be no higher priority for the United States than encouraging Japan and Western Europe "to join us in giving fresh creativity to our alliances.

The State Department's second highest official, who has been acting secretary in the absence of Henry Kissinger and who has been named President Nixon's chief economic coordinator, declared that the U.S. partnership with Europe and Japan has deterred major threats to mutual security for more than two decades. "Now we are in the process of adjusting our relationships to new international conditions. many of them the result of our mutual successes," he said in a commencement address at Tusculum College in Greenville, Tenn. Mr. Rush said that alliances which once drew their sole motivating force from fear of aggression must now define new and positive purposes. He referred to negotiations for mutual and balanced reduction of rollitary forces between NATO and the Warsaw Pact powers and the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

Inflation and Watergate

Watergaté is the great topic of discussion in the United States today, but inflation is the great worry. Although the rate may not be as high in America as elsewhere, it is higher than has been known for many years, and the circumstances surrounding it are baffling. It is not the result of war. or preparation for war (although it may be in part the dregs of war), and it comes in the midst of the most profound international economic uncertainty.

Given the extent of American economic strength-which is very great-it would seem that all the United States really has to fear, as Franklin D. Roosevelt so memorably said in a more desperate situation more than 40 years ago, is fear itself. But where is the voice now that can say that, and carry con-

"The storms are abating." President Nixon told the country on Saturday. And he might well be right, although economists are at odds both about the nature of the storms and the degree of their abatement. But words from the White House, these days, do not win instant respect, and the actions the President proposes-"budgetary restraint, no tax cut, tight money"-however wise under the circumstances, do not appeal to the public imagination. By comparison with the drastic innovations of the New Deal they do not seem as "harsh medicine" as Mr. Nixon termed them, but to accept them as sufficient for the day requires a confidence in the administration which has been dissipated by Watergate.

It would be wrong to place all the uncertainty on the current crop of scandals and the prospect of impeachment. In that satire on the Hoover era, "Of Thee I Sing," President Wintergreen warns his vice-president, Throttlebottom, against making speeches because they send the stock market down. And when Throttlebottom asks how to make the stock market go up, Wintergreen brought the curtain and the house down with a heartfelt: "I wish I knew!"

But Watergate has interfered, sadly, with the ability of the country and its government to concentrate on discussions of the nature of the economic condition, and the measures that might be employed to improve it. Even the appointment of Kenneth Rush as counselor to the President on economic matters awakened questioning whether, as one Democratic senator put it, this was a "serious attempt" to cope with the problem or "just another public relations gesture." This might be dismissed as mere partisanship, but it does reflect the crisis of confidence that exists.

Mr. Nixon is trying to ride out one storm -the storm over Watergate. This is clearly not abating. The country must ride out Watergate and "slumpflation." Neither is of an intensity that threatens the basic American political or economic structure. But the combination, in a world that will not permit the United States to go off in a corner and walt out the stresses, is trouble-

The Duke of Jazz

Edward Kennedy Ellington did not like the word "jazz" as applied to the idiom which he transmuted from the sound of little smoke-filled honky-tonks on the disreputable verge of a society to moving music of great concert halls and cathedrals at its most respectable center. But jazz it was. and jazz it probably will remain, with its sharp echoes of the sadness and the joyand, thanks in no small part to the Duke -the aspirations of a race that flourished able.

in Africa, was shaped and often brutally malformed in America, and has now found many voices to tell of those deep-biting experiences. Duke Ellington was not alone in finding the breadth of artistic emotion that jazz contained, but in the authenticity and subtlety with which he wrought it, in the impact of his own vivid personality upon lt, he did more than any other individual to give jazz its greatness. Canada is rightly showing the way by suspending its aid to India's atomic energy program. Other donors, such as the United States, the Soviet Union and France, have a moral, if not a legal, obligation to do the same and to respond favorably to Ottawa's call for joint consideration of "the broad international implications" of India's action.

The argument that the five present nuclear powers, having known sin, may not point their finger at India is like saying that a sixth wrong can make a right. The fact that nuclear weapons have spread as far as they have—and are only beginning to be subjected to useful measures of arms control -makes it even more vital to prevent them from proliferating further, beyond the possibility of control.

Moreover, the five present nuclear-weapons countries are the five permanent members of the United Nations Security Council, accepted by the world community as possess-

> Canada has taken the lead in calling for action because of the supposition that the piutonium used in the Indian explosion came from a Canadian reactor. And Canada has made it clear repeatedly-as has the Nonproliferation Treaty - that there is no such thing as a "peaceful" nuclear explosion distinguishable from a military blast.

> The Nonproliferation Treaty, for this very reason, provides for the supply of peaceful explosive services by the nuclear countries to other nations at cost if and when such explosions become safe and economically advantageous. But that possibility, once thought close at hand, has receded further and further into the future with each experimental test. Many experts believe the pursuit of this will-o'-the-wisp, which threatens more damage than gain, should now be abandoned. It is hardly likely that India can develop peaceful uses for nuclear explosives more quickly than the major nuclear powers.

Politics Before Children

Citing Washington's "deep disappointment" in the alleged failure of Vietnamese Communists to show a genuine commitment to peace, the U.S. government has insisted that the United Nations Children's Fund not use American money to help finance new programs for child aid in North Vietnam and Communist-held areas of the South. It is the American people who should be disanpointed that their government could stoop to put politics ahead of the welfare of children anywhere.

UNICEF has a long and honorable record of scrupulously nonpolitical assistance to children in more than 100 countries, including compassionate aid to both sides during the Nigerian civil war. It has supported thild aid programs in South Vietnam since 1956 and has earmarked $11.2 million for the South in the disputed new program that encompasses all of Indochina,

The U.S. government, on the contrary, has a shameful history of neglect for child welfare in Vietnam, even in the South. It was only after the most intensive prodding from Congress and private citizens that the administration agreed recently to step up its contribution to the South's war-destitute children-including thousands of illegitimate olispring of U.S. servicemen-to a meager $7.2 million.

Fortunately, UNICEF has adequate resources and resolve to go ahead with its planto help primary schools in North Vietnam and child health services in Communist-held areas of the South without official American support. Individual Americans can help by contributing directly to UNICEF's human-Itarian effort. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Nothing Ado About Much

By C. L. Sulzberger

GENEVA-Something seems to have gone wrong with the 35nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe. This has been meeting intermittently for 18 months with the idea of more or less formalizing détente between Communist and non-Communist blocs facing each other on the continent.

The Russians, who had actually urged the meeting for years before it finally began, have suddenly reversed their field. Meanwhile, several Western particlpants appear to be souring.

CSCE, as it is known in today's diplomatic jargon, is part of the package in which West and East are trying to foster detente by acknowledging the European status quo left over from World War II and Communism's conquests while at the same time promoting freedom the East and reducing defense

Moscow is most interested in de jure ratification of frontiers dividing its sphere from the West. The Western countries are trying to insure certain minimal guarantees of freedom of thought and movement in the Soviet area.

Other Bargaining

CSCE is linked to other bargaining: mutual and balanced force reductions (MBFR), SALT and bilateral trade above all between the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.P., all are related to the objective of detente and to compromising the needs and desires of each bloc, subject to the agreement of neutrals in between. At CSCE, which includes the United States and Canada, every European government except Albama's is represented. Many are nonaligned.

The argument that had been slowly shaping up was between Russia, wishing a very precise commitment against any change of frontiers, and the West, seeking Soviet guarantees to extend freedom within its aphere. The West was rejuctant to concede "inviolability" of frontiers, only to agree they could not be altered by violent means. It didn't wish to frustrate an eventual peaceful unification of Germany, for example. Russia was balky about modifying its political system to suit Western concepts of freedom.

Yet progress shalled forward. Leonid Brezhnev was personally committed to detente, despite the opposition of some Kremlin hardliners, and the Soviet boss had confirmed his commitment to Western leaders like Georges Pompidou, Wills Brandt and Richard Nixon. He wanted CSCE to wind up its Geneva phase successfully this spring to enable him to push for a summit in Helsinki before August, where all 35 chiefs of government would put their seal on

Few Achievements

But Brezhnev hasn't achieved what he hoped. The TISA's Soviet trade program is in trouble with Congress. MBFR is in stalemate: SALT is moving very slowly. CSCE hasn't yet stamped its OK on Soviet man-making after World War II and it embarrasses Moscow to hear all the talk here on freedom of movement and opinion when it is having trouble with dissidents at

Yet West European participants also are fed up with Soviet stonewalling on "basket three" as the section on human rights is called because of its agenda number. Some Westerners are starting to murmur the obvious. What can be done if Russia gives guarantees of liberty-and then starts to renege on them after winning its own point on European fron-

The big trade-off had been shaping up: More Western yield on the issue that was paramount in Soviet eyes, "inviolability" of borders; and more Soviet yield on the paramount issue for the West, widening chinks in what 15 once called the iron curtain.

sians even rejected language on particular clauses which they previously had accepted. Before Easter they assured Western dipplomats they would be more generous than expected on "basket three"-once accord was reached on frontiers. No such flexibility has materialized.

What has some wrong? Brezhnev is committed to reducing tension in the West, possibly to strengthen his rear while facing a hostile China. But maybe the Soviet leader is worried that detente takes too long to achieve. Meantime; he sees Washington gaining influence in the Middle East at Moscow's expense and holding up the promise of commerciai goodies. Or maybe Pompidou's death,

Brandt's political demise and the possible disappearance of Nixon have suddenly changed the picture. Russian chiefs have always been used to dealing with individual foreign peers. Now these have either vanished or we sliding into limbo. Does Breshnev have an embarrassed feeling that his hand is outstretched and there's nobody around to

U.S. Leaders' Silence

The Other 'Cover-U

By James Reston

WASHINGTON-One of the ness and sphit of de marked features of the present national crisis is the comparative allence of many leaders of the institutions, communities and states of the republic. They are obviously not without opinions on the moral squalor of the Nixon administration, for they state them eloquently and even vehemently in private. But most of them say nothing in public. There are, of course, noisble exceptions among leaders of the church, the bar, the universities and the press. The President's own resident priest in the White House, Father McLaughlin, at least spoke up for his boss, but when the President's other favorite preschers, including the Rev. Billy Graham, were asked for their opinions about his language and conduct, they passed by on the other side.

This is typical of a great many other men and women whose character and position have great influence in their communities. Seldom a day goes by that a letter from some such person does not arrive in this office, either scalding the President or scalding the press, usually with the underscored notation: "This is not for publication."

National Crisis

What they seem to be saying is that we are certainly in a national crisis, but keep me out of it. Leave it to the lawyers, the Congress, the courts and the press. This is the larger coverup in the controversy: The coverup of the true feelings of many men and women who know they have influence but don't want to commit themselves in public on the moral issues.

The legal issues and personal fudgment on the guilt or inno-cence of the President are of course different matters. These questions are before the courts and the Congress. Private citizens do not have all the evidence, and Mr. Nixon is apparently determined to see that all the evidence is not made available to the public, or even to the courts and Congress. According-ly, silence by outsiders at this point on the legal questions is understandable.

But the theory of democracy is that we are all insiders on the conduct of the men we elect, on whether they tell the truth, whether they make essential eyidence available or conceal it, and whether they act in accordance with their trust or evade it.

"Who shall be the judge whether the prince or legislative act contrary to their trust?" John Locke asked. "The people shall judge: For who shall be judge whether the trustee or deputy acts well and according to trust reposed him, but he who deputes him ... " (Locke, Second Treatise of Civil Government, Chapter XIX).

"There is no week nor day nor Walt Whitman wrote, "when tyranny may not enter upon this country, if the people lose their sunreme confidence in themselves—and lose their rough-

As Arthur Schlesinger p out at the end of "The In Presidency," James Madiso not place his reliance for security of the republic on "; ment barriers." In the er concluded, the Constitution live only if it embodied the of the American people.

FEW YORK -Brian Crosser of its blowsy receptiveness to Soviet London, who is the head of the Institute for the Study of Conflict, has written an analysis for the Times of London of the strategic meaning of the imminent reopening of the Suez of Soviet ship days"-es Mr. Cro-Canal. In laymen's terms, it means that the distance between the Black Sea and the Indian Ocean will be reduced by 2,000 miles. So what? "When the Suez Canal route is fully operative," the sober-minded, softspoken Mr. Crosier explains, "the major oil-producing countries will be effectively ringed by the Soviet Navy. In the longer term," he adds, "the supply of Middle East oil to Western Eu-and his Kremlin colleagues." Permit me to introduce Adm Gorshkov. He is the gentleman who, as commander in chief of the Soviet Navy, said on July 28, 1967: "The Soviet Navy has been converted, in the full sense of the word, into an offensive type long-range armed force... which could exert a decisive influence on the course of an armed struggle in theaters of military operations of vast trient... and which is also able to support state interests at sea in peace-

And, most recently, India has been in the news, objecting to a proposed U.S. naval build-up of modest naval bunkering facilities Diego Garcia Island, which is 1,000 miles away from the tip of India, against which the United States has no obviously nearessive designs, having, when last heard from on the general point, torn up an Indian IOU of a halfdocen million dollars, indeed & gesture of noblesse oblige.

What is significant, of course, is that India's instinctive gesture of hyper-modesty, reaching to protect all its sensitive parts from any taint of familiarity by Uncle Sam, was not evidenced at all in zier exactly puts it, applying the warship-s-day formula to the Indian Ocean-has increased from 2,000 in 1968 to more than 8,000 at present, It exceeds the number of U.S. ship days by more than three to one." Inasmuch as the strain of such emberant military mission on an conomy as straitened as - Russta's is inexplicable except on evangelistic grounds, it must be assumed that the Soviet Union has an objective. That objective was only dimly perceived up until quite recently, when the Arabs demonstrated that the control of the vital spigot in the Persian Gulf meant a great deal.

was mere strategic projection. One could imagine Adm. Gorshkoy patiently explaining to the Kremin the strategic benefits of dominating the seas around the Persian Gulf. #### Greece Agrees To-Meet Turkey On Oil Dispute

ANKARA, May 26 (Reuters).-Greece has agreed to negotiate with Turkey on their dispute over oil exploration in the Aegean Sea, Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit announced yesterday.

In Pebruary, Greece protested when Turkey granted oil exploration rights in the Aegean to the Turkish state-owned oil company. Turkey said the rights, although outside its six-mile terri-torial limit, were on the Anatolian continental shelf.

In an answer to the Greek protest, Turkey proposed solving the dispute by negotiation.

Greece has been insisting on rights to the shelf around each of the Greek islands, some of which are only a mile from the Turkish mainland. But Turkish Poreign Minister Turhan Gunes said in a recent statement that Turkey would not let the Aegean become a "Greek lake."

Mr. Ecevit said Greece had agreed to fix the borders of the two countries continental shelves through negotiations and in a

Special Air Survives 25 Years of Tension

Berlin—Its Spirit Cannot Be Walled In

By Hubert J. Erb

DERLIN (AP), — "Berlin." the Berliners say with stubborn pride, "is still Berlin."

The boast defies the grim reality of the Berlin wall and the Western sector's precarious political and economic situation 125 miles inside Communist East Germany.

Twenty-five years after Germany's division into two states. West Berlin remains a rump city, beautiful in the spring sunlight and glittering at night, but still occupied by foreign armies, still without sovereignty and with only disrupted political ties to Bonn, the capital of West Germany. Across the wall, Berlin's East-ern sector has won back some of what the city as a whole lost after defeat in war. East Ber-lin is the capital of the Communist half of what is left of Hitler's Greater German Reich. East Germany is recognized by more than 100 states. France and Britain have ambassadors in residence. The United States is expected to recognize East Germany later this year.

Freedom Issue

The 23 million West Berliners feel politically unperprivileged although vastly better off than their Eastern cousins in terms of liberty and material well-being. The 1.1 million East Berliners are penned behind their government's wall while the West Berliners may pass through it, although not freely.

For a time, West Berlin benefited from its cold war status as a democratic island in a menacing Communist sea. But in recent years, Berlin has lost many of its biggest company headquarters as the firms, and their vounger ambitious executives found West Germany a better place for Common Market

European Security Summit -Time Quickly Running Out

GENEVA (NYT).—The possibility of holding an East-West summit meeting this summer to conclude the European Security Conference is dimming rapidly, conference sources say.

Leonid Brezhnev, the Soviet Communist party leader, is known to have hoped that the borgaining would be completed in time for the signing in a July summit session in Helsinki of a declaration marking a new era in East-West relations.

However, because the conference has yet to make a breakforough on such key human-rights issues as freer flows of information and persons across frontiers, the possibility of holding the final, ceremontal phase in July is in serious doubt.

Demand Is Met

The West is particularly disappointed because it had expected Soviet concessions in exchange for having met, just before the Easter break, a major Soviet demand that the frontiers that emerged from the post-World War II division of Europe be recognized as

Nevertheless, the U.S. delegation, which is headed by Ambassador Albert Sherer jr., does not rule out the possibility of reaching an accord by the end of June.

Soviet inaction on the human-rights questions could be only a tactical maneuver that may be replaced by a more flexible attitude before it becomes impossible to hold the final phase in July, sources close to the delegation say. If this phase cannot be held in July. it would have to be put back until after the summer, according to conference officials.

Decisive Moves

The Soviet Union, according to some Western diplomats, may be waiting for the dust to settle from the government changes in France and West Germany and President Nixon's domestic difficulties before it makes decisive moves.

Nevertheless, Moscow is less concerned now than in the past about the timing of the conference's final phase, according to Communist sources. The Soviet emphasis is no longer on the need for a rapid completion of the negotiations but on the necessity of recognizing that the talks must be pursued to a satisfactory conclusion, the sources say.

Change Could Help Portugal

Losing an Empire, Gaining Respec

By Henry Giniger

ISBON ONTO,-No economic catastrophe would befall Portugal if it were to lose its African empire, and it would even find substantial advantages in such a loss, according to economic and political analysts here. Some economic and social dis-location would occur from the loss of the colonies, which is an increasingly strong prospect. In one way or another, Liston will lose political control of Angola, Mozambique and Portuguese Guinea, which total close to 7 percent of the African landmass. It is difficult to find dispasstonate opinion here, for many of those who have enthusiastically supported the downfall of the rigid and imperial-minded dictatorship find it difficult to envisage Portugal confined to its narrow European frontiers. "What would poor little Portugal do without the overseas areas?" is a question often asked. Here, as elsewhere, empire is almost automatically associated with power and wealth, yet the country was faced with the paradox of being the poorest in Western Europe and the only one with a real empire.

It is next to impossible to ascertain the extent of Portu-guese investment in Africa. The overseas economies have been controlled by a few large combines. Concerns such as Com-panhia Uniao Fabril and Champalimaud have one foot in Portugal and one foot in Africa, and because the African areas are considered part of Portugal, breakdowns on where the money is are not readily available.

Transfers of Funds

Transfers of private funds and profits between Africa and Portugal have shown a net of well over $100 million in favor of Portugal in the last two years. This statistic, from the Bank of Portugal, is an indication of the profitability of the investments in commerce, banking, insurance, industry, transport and agriculture.

Dozens of small Portuguese concerns, notably in textiles and food processing, produce almost exclusively for the African market. These operations, for the most part inefficient and antiquated, have been traditionally dependent on what has been a protected trading area. The loss of the overseas markets would probably mean the closing of many companies or their absorption into larger ones, with consequent unemployment.

But the effect of a loss of African markets on overall Portuguese trade would be much weaker now than it would have been a few years ago. Exports to the overseas areas fell from 29.8 percent of total exports in 1959 to 148 percent last year. There has been a corresponding rise in exports to the rest of Europe. UN sanctions and survive economically in a world of enemies, After Rhodesia declared itself independent in 1965, the UN passed a series of sanctions bar-holds power over a 20-to-1 black African majority, Instead, two things happened: The Rhodesian economy moved toward self-sufficiency. It began to manufacture things it once imported: shoes, refrigerators, drugs, electrical supplies and spite of the sanctions, a drought which hurt many crops, and costs of fighting a guerrilla war against African liberation movements. The report also mentioned some of Rhodesia's economic problems. Inflation abroad will increase indulging in nostalate for those talee-e-week preconferences of Franklin Romanelt when 50 or 60 Teporters gathered around the Fresident's dealt is a futile exercise—Columnist Marquis Childs, in a speech at Johns Hopkins University.

WASHINGTON (WP).-Since there have been so many allusions of late to the Propagatit press conferences, one would think they were marvels of openness. A closer look is in order: It would be worse than future to lay to return to them. My mind goes back to those exhibitrating days, errea 1936. when I was a national affairs writer for Time in New York. Occasionally, I found myself in Washington and, if the day was right, the Roosevelt press contention was a "pecial treat laid on by the hired stringer. This stringer had a special importance to Time. He was regularly employed by a daily newspaper and was a member of the White House Correspondents Association. It those days only members of that organization were automatically eligible to attend presidential press conferences. Magazine writers and reporters and radio commentators and reporters were barred there just as they were from the Senate and House press galleries. But a member like our strunger could bring along a guest journalist occasionally. This rule was obviously intended as a device for character-building with publishers and editors from back home, and it wasn't stretched too much by our amiable stringer-employer relationship.

Wild Differences

The Roosevelt press conference itself was as widtly outferent from anything that would be tolerated by the media of public today as were these closed arrangements.

As he was crippled, the President was put in place calmid his desk before the press was admined. Thus it was the complemen of the press and not the President who made the entrance when the stage was set. It was not the theathead one we are accustomed to today, though it was not entirely untheatrical. As the doors were opened, there, at stage center, sat the President in shirtsleeves and with that inevitable holder jutting aggressively upward from his smiling lips. As they strede in by twos and threes to belly up in a crescent before the broad cluttered desk, the repeated litany, "Good morning, Mr. President," was acknowledged from behind the desk with a series of gracious nods and deepening smiles.

Then, while the crescent was still forming, the cigarette holder was lifted slowly from the lips with a special flare and the smoldering eigarette was pointed at a columnist. That very morning his column had contained something the Presicent didn't like at all. With the smile still playing around his tips, the President was telling him and his colleagues in ne uncertain terms how lowly he regarded a journalistic talent that could be so wrong. His condescending whimsy and the demeaning jibes that sprinkled his running banter left no doubts before the press conference began about who was boss and was coing to run the show.

No Quotes

As the press conference began, one was soon aware of the most astounding fact of all: It was the rule, apparently cheerfully accepted by the accommodating press, that the President could not be quoted directly unless he granted specific permussion. Thus, much of importance that he had to say in answer to questions was completely off the record or could be attributed only to a nameless White House source. On occasion he would grant a request for direct quotation of an answer just given (after a wink or nod from press secretary Steve Early usually; and then restate his answer, changing it ever so subtly while pencils raced across paper. About three days after a press conference the White House issued an edited transcript which was given scant attention by the press.

Sometimes the President would simply refuse to answer a question and occasionally he would ridicule a questioner or rear his head back and just laugh derisively. The press was inclined to greet the President's most outrageous jibes with nervous hughter-as when the President "ordered" John

O'Donnell, the dignified political columnist of the New York Daily News, to put on a dimee cap and stand in the corner after he had asked a particularly annoying question. They were all members of the club in good standing and, oh, so anxious to stay that way.

President Roosevelt was a master, if jolly, manipulator of the press, but if he had something he wanted to get to the public in his own way, he commandeered the radio networks for a fireside chat. That hasn't changed very much, but a Roosevelt type press conference would be unacceptable to today's public and media as well. It wouldn't play in Peoria.

Russia have an effective parity: in strategic nuclear weapons. The rise of Europe and Japan as economic powers has profoundly affected U.S. economic interests Americans have seen the U.S. dollar, once thought the supreme currency, twice devalued.

Furthermore, we have left the sterile polemics of the cold war behind. The Russians are now talking in terms of détente and cooperation. We have constructive discussions proceeding—the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, the falks on Mutual and Balanced Force Reductions, the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe—instead of exchanges of insults. These discussions will be a test of the extent to which the Russians are prepared to recognize the substance as well as the principle of détente.

In this vastly changed situation it is not surprising that the continuing validity of the alliance is questioned by many people. So why does the British government feel that the alliance is still vital as an instrument of defense, and an important tool of détente?

The alliance was formed in response to a threat. That threat may seem to have receded in new atmosphere of detente. But there is no sign that the Russians, who must want to improve the living standards of their people just as much as we in the West do, are dismantling the powerful forces they maintain at enormous cost.

Soviet military power has increased and is increasing. They have built up a strategic nuclear force to the point where they have parity with the United States. Though, unlike Europe, they do not depend on the world's sea lanes for vital supplies, they have built the second largest bettle fleet in the world. Their capacity to enforce their views by the use or threat of the use of force is formidable

In this situation the ultimate guarantee of Europe's security is America's strategic power. And America knows that if Europe were to fall under Russian domination it would mean a basic shift in the whole world security situation. America's own security rould be threatened. As Henry Kissinger said in March this year, "Of course the delense of Europe is also the defense of the United States and we do not have troops in Europe in order to do a favor to the Europeans."

Bill-Paying

The Europeans already do a great deal-in their own detense and have made great efforts to improve their contribution. In the 10 years from 1963 to 1973 the European members of the alliance have increased their proportion of NATO countries' defense expenditure from one-quarter to one-third; this is a real shift in relative efforts. Eurogroup of Defense Ministers, formed after an initiative from Denis Healey, then British secreof state for defense, has nlared a considerante part in these efforts. In the five years since Eurogroup was formed the total defense budget of its mombers has almost doubled—trom $15.8 billion to $30.2 billion—trinic that for North America has in fact declined slightly, from $82.5 billion to $80.8 billion

In 1970 the Eurogroup is unched the European Defense Improvement Program a fine-year $1-billion program of additional defense improvements, now nearly complete. And the momentum of Eurogroup force improvements has been maintained: for instance, en 1973 and 1974 Eurogroup countries will nave introbattle tanks, over 2,500 other armored vehicles, over 300 modern combat sircrait and 60 or more warships.
The European alices recognize that they must continue to pull their weight in the alliance. But I hope that American oublic opinion similarly recognizes the considerable, and increasing, evtent to which they are already doing so. As the U.S. secretary of defense said in his latest annual report: "In tairness, we should acknowledge at the outset that NATO defense has been far from a single-handed effort by the United States. > Mr. Schmidt, who like Mr. Giscard d'Estaing has been the finance minister of his country, has said he believes an important first step loward getting the Common Market working again is coordinating monetary and fiscal policies to control inflation, ine and pean economies

France, which has deliberately permitted inflation as a way of assuring high employment, had a rate of 10 percent last year. West Germany, which keeps in-terest rates high even though employment in such sectors as automobile manufacturing and construction has been hurt, had the lowest rate of inflation last year, about 7.5 percent.

"Schmidt and Giscard have decision-making power combined with a grasp of detail," a Western diplomat here commented on the two men's rapport. "Now the question is, what will they actually agree on?"

Limits of Action

The answer is, not necessarily anything. Domestic politics in both countries limit what their leaders can do

The popular mood in France probably would not tolerate un-popular deflationary measures. In West Germany, the mood at the moment is "We're taking care of our problems, why should we have to solve anybody else's?" the rhetorical Europeanist Mr. Brandt has been replaced by the more pragmatic purse string

The Schmidt government's statement welcoming Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's campaign comments on the French-German relationship and on the necessity of keeping to the Common Market's goals for political and monetary union in Europe by 1980 were expressions of hope rather than a response to concrete proposals.

In 1973, the Group's activity, under the influence of the favourable economic situation, was characterized by the full utilization of productive capacities and by a firmer trend of selling prices, accentuated, as a marter of fact, by increasing inflation.

This was reflected in sales to external customers, which tops by 23%, and in the cash flow, which increased by 11%. The latter comprises depreciation, up 26%, and the consolidated net profit, up 42%, This year, there were 3.Fr. 133 million of exceptional profits, insteed of exceptional charges of B.Fr. 69 million in 1972. Without reaching the 1929 level, profitability markedly exceeded that of 1970-1979. The share in the net profit applicable to Solvay & Cie is substantially on the increase, as a result of a more con-sideable rise in the profits of the parent company and of subsidiaries where the Group's shareholding is 100%.

A number of banks reported turning down invitations to join in underwriting the Canon bonds because they found no enthusiasm for the paper among their clientels. In short, the lure of the option to convert the bonds into the common stock did not work because the outlook for share prices in general remains very uncertain.

The poor reception of the Canon loan has caused Asahi Chemical and Nippon Fudosan Bank to delay their plans to come

Another lure that of record high interest rates—is having only modest success. STET, the Italian telephone company, is offering investors floating-rate notes pegged at three-quarters of a percentage point over the London interbank offered (LIBO) rate for six-month Eurodollar deposits.

The presumed appeal was that investors with relatively small sums—as little as $1,000—could get a return on their money that normally could only be had by investing upward of $10,000 in the short-term Eurodollar deposit market.

Placed With Banks

Although the 10-year notes are fully underwritten, most of this paper will be placed among banks rather than small individual investors. With banks rapidly reaching their self-imposed limits on loans to Italy, it had been hoped that the government would open up a new source of funds by fashioning an instrument designed to attract the general Dubiic.

According to the managers of the issue, private clients appear to account for about a third of

In any event, the terms of the STET loan are sufficiently attractive to assure placement among the underwriting banks regardless of the retail demand. (Continued on Page 11, Col. 4)

The U.S. Economic Scene

Signs of Easing in Inflation Surge Detected

By Thomas E. Mullaney NEW YORK, May 26 (NYT). -Earlier this month it appeared that a turn for the better had occurred in some important sectors of the nation's economy, with industrial production stariing upward after a four-month slide and brighter statistics evolving in retail business, auto sales, housing and new-order bookings for many lines of activity. Now there is some reason for optimism that the country's horrendous experience with a record high level of inflation in double digits may have passed its crest. If those trends of production, sales and inflation can be sustained, and if the sharp escalation of interest rates can be halted fairly soon, the complex-ion of the American economy would soon be assuming a much brighter hue.

It would not leave the public and the business world without an ample quota of pronlems, but it would mean that some of the more serious ones, which so bedeviled the economic scene earlier this year, would be muti-gated considerably.

Prospects are good for further short-term abatement of the explosive rise in food prices, but the outlook for the cost of energy and industrial prices in general is somewhat more murky, as is the longer-range prospect for farm and food prices. Economists watching commodity prices have been heartened by the sharp declines that have occurred in key farm produce during the last two months. From its record high of $6.70 a bushel in February, wheat dropped rather suddenly to $3.42 two weeks ago; corn has come down from its 1974 top of $3.35 a bushel to $2.60, and soybeans have slipped back from $6.80 to below the so-cent-a-pound level. At home, there is a cautious optimism, too, that American industry will resist an excessive rash of fresh increases in a wide array of goods. As expected, there was a bulge in industrial prices following the lifting of many economic controls at the end of April. But, so far at least, the parade has been more moderate than many had feared.

On another front - interest rates-the zenith may not have been reached yet. But may be close at hand—perhaps within a few weeks after a possible further and slight upward ratcheting of short-term rates. Many banking observers are beginning to feel that the current 11 3/4 percent level or 12 percent may represent the high-water mark for now in the prime lending rate at the nation's banks.

In addition to their worries about high interest rates, the inflated prices for the materials they buy and other cost increases, businessmen are concerned about the continued desultory performance of the stock market

Until Friday, the last week was another discouraging and depressed period for most stock prices, with the popular market averages setting new lows for this year and approaching the bottom points reached in 1973.

The Dow-Jones Industrial Average, for instance, descended almost to the 800 level last Wednesday before staging a mild upturn to end the week at 816.65. Its bottom last year was 788.31

BRITISH LAND COMPANY LIMITED

British Land, headed by Mr. John Ritblat, its chairman, has made European expansion a part of its principal objectives; in August 1972, beginning with the creation of its French subsidiary.

The company's actual name does not at all suggest the irica of investment in France. Nevertheless the Director of the French subsidiary. Mr. Matheson, is perfectly clear about his ideas; "We are not speculators, and we have come to Prance

The first British Land phase of development in France following the vishes of the parent company and the majority of British investors in France, was concentrated upon the more select areas of Paris. The first ouilding bought was 56 Rue du Faubourg Saint-Honoré from the Sociéte Générale d'Entreprise, who sold the building in order to move in 1974, to their new headquarters in the suburbs of Paris. The project was completed with the acquisition of the adjacent buildings, including notably the 'Cours aux Antiquaires'. In all, the company owns an area of 30,000 m2 in one of the best parts of Paris. To this has to be added a small building in the 17th arrondissement. Rue Ampère, which when completely renovated by September 1974, will give good quality office space, enhanced by the addition of basement parking.

The second phase began with the search for offices in the provinces. 2,000 mg of offices was purchased from the Societe d'Amenagement d'Equipement du Nord, in the renovated area of La Madeleine in Lille. Then on to Cerry-Pontoise at "Les 3-Fontaines", where Series Amenagement initially sold an area of the series amenagement initially sold an area of the Series amenagement initially sold an area of the Series amenagement initially of thick office building of the floors comprising 6,000 m2, half of which 2.500 m2 at terrace level has been recently nuchased. In Lyon, a building in "Le Tonkin" of 3.000 m2 has been purchased from S.M.C.I. The search in the industrial sector has produced 10.000 m2 of parchouses and offices at Argenteuil, to the north of Paris, completion of which will be in August 1974.

By the end of the year the above mentioned buildings will have been completed, and the portfolio will be consolidated and managed to achieve a sound foundation for future growth. The appraisal of potential investments will continue.

Tailored Issue

Another specially tailored iss at sue is a 20-million Unit-of-Ac-a.17 count offering for Ireland. The 6 ig 10-year loan will carry a coupon of 9 1-2 percent-terms which are much more generous than what is available to Belgian investors -for whom the loan is tailored on their domestic market.

Subscriptions to the loan are to be paid in Belgian francs, assuring investors in Belgium and Luxembourg of no exchange risk. The borrower could ask for payment in any of the five UA reference currencies of the European nations still linked in the joint currency float. But seeking deutsche marks, for example, would mean an instant loss for Belgian investors since value of one UA is fixed at 3.21 DM or 48.6572 Belgian iranes. However, at current market rates Belgian investors would have to spend 50 francs for 3.21 DM -or more than the fixed parity, Thus, paying in francs eliminates this immediate loss as well as any foreign exchange risk.

The high coupon and the short life offered on Euroguilder notes keep that market open. Nederlandsche Middenstandsbank floating 35 million guilders of five-year notes with a coupon of 9 1 2 percent and an issue price of 99.

German bankers expect the Euro DM market to open within the next month and forecast that the first issues will be five to ee.en-year notes, reflecting investor demand—where it exists for short-term paper.

Ironically, Briscoe had appeared to have changed the tempo of the fight early in the round. #### A Mixup in Dates Postpones Matches

ROME, May 26 (UPI) .-- Fourthseeded Stan Smith and fellow-American Toin Gorman did not compete in today's opening-round matches at the Italian Open tennis championships because of misunderstanding about tournament's starting date.

Smith, 11th-ranked Gorman and Charles Pasarell of Puerto Rico told tournament officials last night that they would not play today because they had not had enough practice. They said thought the tournament would begin tomorrow.

"It was a misunderstanding." said Gianfranco Canicli, secretary general of the organizing com-mittee. We informed all the federations in April of the May 25 starting date but realized only last night that not everyone mas amare."

Only two opening-round matches were played yesterday, however, with most of the day taken up by qualification-round finals.

"There was a lack of communication as to when the tournament was supposed to start." said Richard Evans, information director of the Association of Tennis Professionals Gorman. Smith and Pasarell arrived late Friday and needed at least two days of practice because this is their first tournament on clay this year.

In other off-the-court action vesterday, Jimmy Country of the United States lost his final bid to play in the Open when the Italian Federation renffirmed its ban on all players who have competed in the World Team Tennis league. After Connors met with Cameli, the Italian said, "There were absolutely no grounds for a change in the federation's position. The WTF and its players are banned in Italy and that's it. I am sorry for Connors. I am afraid he hasn't fully understood our position, but there is nothing he can

MAYBE, strictly speaking, it is funny spots in "Only Gentle not a mystery book. But it Can Play." McLeave, who does have action, suspense and, read Fleming and his success at the end, a holocaust, And it has come to the conclusion is exceedingly well-written. So any spy worth his sait musdon't miss "Carrie" by Stephen a bon vivant, must know a King (Doubleday, $5.95), a first wines, must play a sharp g novel and one guaranteed to give you a chill

"Carrie" is about a telekinetic girl in a small town in Maine. She is an unhappy girl. Her mother is a horror: a religious fanatic eager to beat the goodness of Christ into sinners with a powerful right hand. No wonder Carrie grows up all but mute. unattractive, shy. She is the butt of jokes in school; she is poorly coordinated; she does not appear to be very bright. But she has strange gifts. Finally, pushed beyond what her emotional state can absorb, she runs psychically amok, unleashing all the latent powers in her. The result is sheer disaster for her and for all around her.

King does more than tell a story. He is a schoolteacher himself, and he gets into Carrie's mind as well as into the minds of her classmates. He also knows a thing or two about symbolism -blood symbolism especially. That this is a first novel is amazing. King writes with the kind of sureness normally associated only with veteran writers. This mixture of science fiction, the occult, secondary-school sociology, kids good and bad and genetics turns out to be an extraordinary

As brilliant as the King novel is, so Hugh McLeave's "Only Gentlemen Can Play" (Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, $5.95; is bad. Bad? It's dismal. While castling king's wing and castling queen's wing bear some resemblance to each other, they are worlds apart in the problems they create. Although castling in either direction serves the same general purposes—providing security for the king and mobilizing the rook—the side one castles on deterside one castles on deter-mines which of the two is being given greater weight,

The two ways of castling are not symmetrical. On the kingside the king ends up at KNI where it is better sheltered from battles raging in the center; on the queenside the rook ends up at Q1 where it can take part at once in the struggle for a center file.

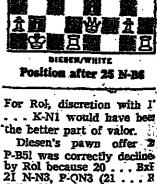

Thus, when the primary consideration is the speediest augmenting of an attack in the center, O-O-O may give the best chance of success; when defense is most important, O-O is usually to be pre-ferred.

Watch That King!

Of course, there are many situations where O-O-O is em-ployed for defensive purposes, but then it is very often necessary to withdraw the king from the center with K-NI as soon as possible. Neglect of this precaution on the part of the Dutch player G. Rol in the last round of the Hastings Challengers. Tournament gave the 16-year-old United States master Mark Diesen the opportunity for a smashing blow that gave him the game and the first prize.

It is standard for both White and Black to castle queenside in this old varin-tion of the Caro-Kann Defense, but while Diesen removed his king mamediately from the QB file (14 K-N1), Rol allowed his king to remain where 13...0-0-0 left

That made all the less sense since, to combat White's greater control of center space (pawn at Q4 as against Black pawns at QB3 and K3), Black is virtually committed to 16 . . P.B4.

An Interest in Preserving Profanity

By Nancy L. Ross WASHINGTON (WP). - Like many Americans these days, Reinhold Aman is busy trying to find out what X equals in the presidential ("eXpletive deleted") transcripts. Unlike those who are doing it mainly for titiliation, he is doing it for science—the science of linguis-

A professor of medieval German literature at the University of Wisconsin (Milwankee), Mr. Aman, 38, has also become an expert on swearing in 50 languages. These range from ancient Greek to Sanskrit, Eskimo to his own native Bavarian dia-

He hailed the White House tapes as a "fantastic, wonder-ful new source of swear words," while at the same time expressing disappointment because the transcripts eliminated so many of the choice morsels.

Mr. Aman says be finds it possible to reconstruct a number of them by observing adjacent words. For example, the transcript reveals Mr. Nixon called Robert Kennedy a "ruthless" (characterization omitted). According to the linguist, the tape most probably continues with either "sonofabitch" "bastard" because these are the nouns most commonly used today in combination with that adjective. "In any case," he said, "you know it isn't 'slob,' or a lot of similar alurs, because no one says 'ruthless slob' Were he granted access to the tapes in the interest of preserving profanity for posterity, of course—Mr. Aman might well be disappointed in the presidential lack of inventiveness. To hear White House insiders, Mr. Nixon's brand of profanity is standard, four-letter American, "Americans are generally very linguist, who can name 250 Bayarian "cuss" words off the top of his head. "They just don't know how. It's primitive. They have a very limited swearing vocabulary. It's almost always one out of 25 words and

Mr. Aman has found some

"good swearing" in the South Far West and in the backwoods of New England, "But the general American culture is so blah; really, the language is impoverished," he told the Milwaukee Journal

ressons, the most common being sheer frustration. The truck does it because his peers expect him to. The teen-ager seeks to shock his parents. The debutante turned revolutionary sees it as a form of rebellion. The worst reason, according to Washington psychoanalyst Dr. Michael Maccoby, is contempta sense of superiority over one's rivals or enemies. He classifies Mr. Nixon's swearing in this

Time magazine recently quoted psychologist Paul Cameron as estimating the number of "dirty" words in a construction worker's speech at 24 percent whereas the white-collar professional uses only 1 percent in the office, 4 percent at parties. Whatever the reason or the amount, stockbroker and hard hat, revolutionary and President use the same words. Advanced education or elevated income apparently neither advance nor elevate one's cursing; gutter language is heard in the penthouse as well as the sewer.

Mr. Aman first became in-terested in swearing, academically speaking, about a decade ago. Since then he has studied about 1,200 books and articles on the subject covering a period of 3,000 years. His primary meens of discovering profanity in languages he does not know is reading dictionaries. He supplements this study by asking people of various countries and cultures to give him their own dirty words. His findings are due to be published this year under the title "Maledicta: International Bibliography of Pejoration and Verbal Aggres-

Mr Aman declined to state which language, in his opinion, contains the most and/or the most colorful profanity. But he did make these observations in an interview in his office. (Behind his desk a plaque in Gothic script reads: "Yea, though I walk through the Valley of the Shadow of Death, I shall fear no evil; for I am the meanest son-of-a-bitch in the valley.") Curses reflect the tabons of particular culture: sex, sacrilege and scatology. In addition they deal with animals, tools, physical handicaps and ancestor desecration. In a prudish society like ours the sexual revolution be (expletive deleted)-obscenity has more impact than in an Indian culture. Blasphemy has more shock value in deeply religious countries. Sometime curses combine several taboos. Consider this Serbian gypsy curse, for example: "May you copulate with the soul of your dead mother."

• The concepts of God and motherhood are the targets of profanity in almost every cul-ture. Apart from these, Mr. Aman believes the most universal swear word is "dog." The origin of this term of opprobrium lies in the dogs' practice of eating the bodies of dead soldiers after battles in ancient times. Since they are fallen heroes as well as enemies, the dogs got the reputation of commisting acts of desecration. When it came to English, where "dog" is known as "man's hest friend," it took some language juggling to come up with a canine cuss. Hence the use of "bitch" or she-dog.

 Ancient Greek and Latin literature is replete with swear words (by patricians as well as slaves, as is the Bible, Yiddish more than holds its own. Compared to English, Russian is very rich in obscene swear famity referring to a person's excrement and his stupidity. Latin languages have a variety of pejorative suffixes that can change a decent word into a dirty one. But English, in com-mon with German, has no built-in suffix richness and must therefore rely on a limit-ed number of fabricated pre-Any decent word can be used for swearing. A former pupil of Mr. Aman recounts that the professor has been known to come out with a thundering "Kaksi kymmenta yhdeksan!" What sounds like the wrath of the Pharachs descending upon thy house is in reality Finnish for the number 29. Hindus and Navajo Indians both employ "brother-in-law" as a swear word—often on unsuspecting foreigners who appear flattered until they learn better. Rather han meaning "friend of the family" or something like that, it means, "Your sister has no morals. I siept with your sister, so you and I are brother-in-law. On the contrary. "dirty" words tend to become "laundered" or at least "bleached" through constant usage. The currently faddish Amershocks ican "motherf . . . ' many people. Yet in some segments of society the term is being used as an adjective applied to objects and situations as well as humans, with consequently little more meaning or effect than "damn."

Though he does not advocate swearing. Mr. Aman condones it as an emotional safety valve. Better verbal aggression than physical aggression in the Oval Office, he says, as if the President had a real choice between calling X a SOB and belting him across the mouth.

Gloria Swanson Takes PEOPLE: Role of Gloria Swanson

"As soon as I heard they wanted me to play an actress, I figured it was another weirdo," Gloria Swanson, 75, said of her role in "Airport 75." "Producers always think of me in terms of Sunset Boulevard, But I'm not Norma Desmond. I'm not a recluse and I don't live in the past," she told Bob Thomas of the Associated

However, producer Bill Frye and director Jack Smight did not want her to play a "weirdo"—but Miss Swanson still had reservations. She found the dialogue "little-poo" and suggested that she portray an actress called Gloria Swanson.

quel to "Airport" will be her first on the screen in 22 years.

Thieves broke into the Moscow home of a friend of Alexander Solzhenitsyn and took his letters, photographs, books and other writings, dissident sources said Saturday. The sources said the theft appeared to have been the work of political agents, since money and valuables were left untouched. The theft occurred when the friend, Nearilla Suessarova, was keeping an appointment with an anonymous person who had telephoned asking to see her. He didn't keep the appointment, and Miss Snessarova returned to her home and found her door battered in.
